

Mr. Milstein,

It is with great pride and great emphasis on my belief in human understanding that I write to you. I simply want to say that I, on behalf of the disability community in Philadelphia, strongly support the proposed regulation regarding wheelchair accessible taxis. Not only will this end the outright discrimination against people with disabilities in Philadelphia, it will most assuredly be a profound example for other cities across the state, region, etc. to do the same. This is what justice is all about; addressing the inequalities that exist within our society and setting them right. I would like to believe that when this regulation is successfully passed and implemented, it will be a great reminder of the fact that a deep-seated issue such as discrimination can be solved using some of the most basic and diplomatic aspects of our socialized human existence. Simply writing this short comment keeps me thinking about the basic human rights that are at stake surrounding this proposal.

Thank you for your time and involvement.

Sincerely,
Arielle Gascot
