

Hello Charles,

With the current population of wheelchair users in the city of Philadelphia, it is questionable why taxicab owners have not voluntarily converted their vehicles to become wheelchair accessible. This regulation is much needed in keeping Philadelphia a city of concern for equal rights for all of its residents. I also believe this will increase ridership amongst the handicap population, and revenue for the taxicab industry in Philadelphia. In closing, this regulation will continue to exemplify why Philadelphia is known as being the city of Brotherly Love.

Warmest regards,

Leonard Bentley
